

SISA JASPER

IRVING, TEXAS

Sisa is a contemporary artist living and working in the Dallas Texas Metroplex. At age 13, she won the Federal Express Safety Slogan Art Contest and was immediately enrolled into college art classes to pursue her destiny of becoming a “famous artist.” Sisa, however, rejected this predestined future and slowly withdrew from doing anything creative over the next 10 years, and instead, sought a future in financial investments. Success in the financial field and a few life-changing experiences later, her divine gift began to emerge again. In February of 1999, she quit her job in investments and moved to Dallas to pursue her dream. Painting under the assumed name “Sisa” (a family nick name), Dallas proved to be an ideal market for her and within two years she had three independent art consultants representing her work and began averaging two shows per year. She paints in varying mediums including oil, acrylic, pastel, watercolor, metal leafing, gouache, and charcoal and various sub straights such as canvas, board, paper, plexi-glass, and digital art via giclée. Her work can be found in hundreds of private and corporate collections and has appeared in several movies, multiple TV sitcoms, commercials, and even auctioned works by Sotheby’s.
